video: real estate man. ubin mix original version produced by snog and taken from the album 'third mall from the sun'.

snog is a wholly owned subsidiary of the international mind control corporation - entertainment products and perception management division inc.

'to win popularity with the public is one thing. to be popular and respected as a performer and a person is something else again.

david thrussell's career here takes a new turn and rises to a new high. ten strikingly different versions of the one song might seem excessive to some, but once heard you'll agree that each interpretation brings a refreshing new vigour to this cherished classic.

in these fireside and dancefloor favourites there is a gentle, convincing persuasiveness about every rendition. the approach here is so totally, unaffectedly sincere you can't help but feel your whole inner being is touched.

real estate man is no doubt well enough known to you that you have probably been able to hum the melody since you were a child. yet in this presentation, each version is revealed in an entirely new light...so much more meaningful that it's almost as though you had never really heard the song before: a pure electro assault.

it takes a fascinating lot of originality to be a david thrussell...an artist who is not just popular, but respected as well.'
