if there was a league of imaginary soundtrack composers then volker kahl would be one of its leaders. since 2004 he has given his fanbase one kattoo release per year. 'hang on to a dream' is longingly awaited by his fanbase and as with the previous albums there will be no disappointment.

16 tracks of melancholia, intensity and beauty - a kaleidoscope of acoustic and electronic instruments, sample treatments, syncopated drum and percussion beats. all woven into one continuous work of art (without disturbing intermissions in-between).

on this cd, volker departs from his world-music influences and replaces the babylonian disarray with a return to his roots - both as a musician and as an individual. if we keep the imaginary soundtrack as an example then 'megrim' might have been a concept work for mel gibson. 'hang on to a dream', especially tracks like 'you don't know me', would have attracted rainer werner fassbinder's attention for sure.

electronic chamber music for the eclectic listener.
